

Xolmirzayeva Navbahor

Student, Samarkand state of institute foreign languages The faculty of English philology and translation

Abstract: This article explores modern approaches to teaching General English , highlighting methods that integrate technology learner-centered techniques and flexible pedagogy .In addition, it is aim that to encourage students who are between seven and eighteen ages to practice and improve their language skills by new methods in a language centers in a short term of period.

Key words: English, General English (GE), New methods.

INTRODUCTION

Over the last few years, The teaching of General English has evolved significantly. Traditional methods of language instruction, while foundational, are often limited in their ability. In the past, educators largely relied on traditional, textbook-based approaches that emphasized grammar drills and vocabulary lists. However, as the demands of learners have changed, so too have the teaching methods. This shift has introduced a variety of new methods, from task-based learning to blended and flipped classrooms, each designed to meet the evolving needs of learners in a rapidly changing world. Therefore, we have to decided to make uncommon methods. This article will explore the most appropriate and innovative methods currently shaping General English (GE).

1. How do modern approaches to teaching General English differ from traditional method?

2. What benefits do they offer to both educators and learners?

Exploring modern approaches to teaching General English.

International English language is an essential element for effective communication between different people around the world ,which is why the English language is one of the most common language . you can find some types of teaching methods include less lecture-based learning, group learning, game-based learning . For instance ; one of the fundamental method of teaching (GE): M. Phillip. (around 1926). This method was based on three elements namely reading, readers with vocabulary and the usage of the native language judiciously. Reading skill is one of the most modern methods of teaching because of the fact it is the main foundation of the other three skills, if a person knows how to read , he or she understands listening and uses writing ,speaking skills.

Moreover, communicative based learning method is more effective for modern teaching and focus on real-life communication and interaction. This approach contrasts with more traditional, grammar-focused methods. For example: According to Vygotsky, (1978) learners can achieve more complex cognitive tasks with the help of more knowledgeable peers or instructors. From my perspective, it is more truth that communicative learning is reflected in peer interaction and teacher scaffolding and this method has influenced by highlighting the role of collaboration and social interaction.

Generally, modern approaches to teaching (GE) offer more dynamic, engaging and effective ways to develop communicative competence.

Furthermore, gamed based learning can be the most contemporary method in the globalized period.

From my point of view, games may be inherently engaging and can capture students' attention in a way traditional teaching methods may not. These types of methods might probably motivate learners participate actively. However, it is available some drawbacks of focusing on (GBL) due to of the fact games can likely sometimes become more about fun than learning. According to finding the survey conduct, if not carefully selected and aligned with learning objectives, students may pay attention more on winning rather than on the educational content.

What is more," Mobile learning" M. Ally (2004). Mobile learning which highlights how mobile technologies can support personalized and adaptive learning experiences. He stresses that learning should focus on individual needs and learning styles, which mobile platforms can accommodate.

While there are some sound benefits of this belief, I would agree with the point of view. To my mind, it can be frequent topic of discussion, which is based mobile learning method. It can be beneficial type of teaching young generation in these day and even in near future.

Mobile learning (ML) is grounded in flexibility, accessibility and personalized learning, offering an interactive, learner -centered experience. Theories by J. Traxler,(2007) M. Sharples, (2007) A. Kukulska- Hulme,(2006). M. Alley emphasize how mobile devices extend learning beyond the classroom.

In conclusion, nowadays the majority of people tend to learn foreign languages, which is why I have decided to find new methods of teaching, such as game based learning, mobile learning, communicative based learning. In my humble opinion , these types of methods can easily help to learn new languages, particularly English in a short period.

LIST OF LITERATURE:

1. www.Researchgate.com ,
2. www.google.scholar ,
3. www.science.direct.com,
4. " Appropriate teaching methods for general English" (GE) (2020) ,
5. M.Alley (2004) Learner Centered Mobile Learning (LCML) ," Foundation of Educational Theory for Online Learning" ,
6. Vygotsky. The Zone of Proximal Development (ZPD). (1978) " The Development of Higher Psychological Processes",
7. J.Traxler. " Defining Mobile Learning"(2007).